

A black and white photograph capturing a powerful wave crashing over a rocky outcrop. The wave is in the process of breaking, creating a large, white, turbulent splash that dominates the center of the frame. The water is dark and choppy, with white foam and spray visible. The sky is a uniform, light gray, suggesting an overcast day. The overall scene conveys a sense of raw, natural power and energy.